

CREATE A CULTURE OF FEEDBACK

The 6 Critical Practices for Leading a Team
April Monthly Manager Meeting

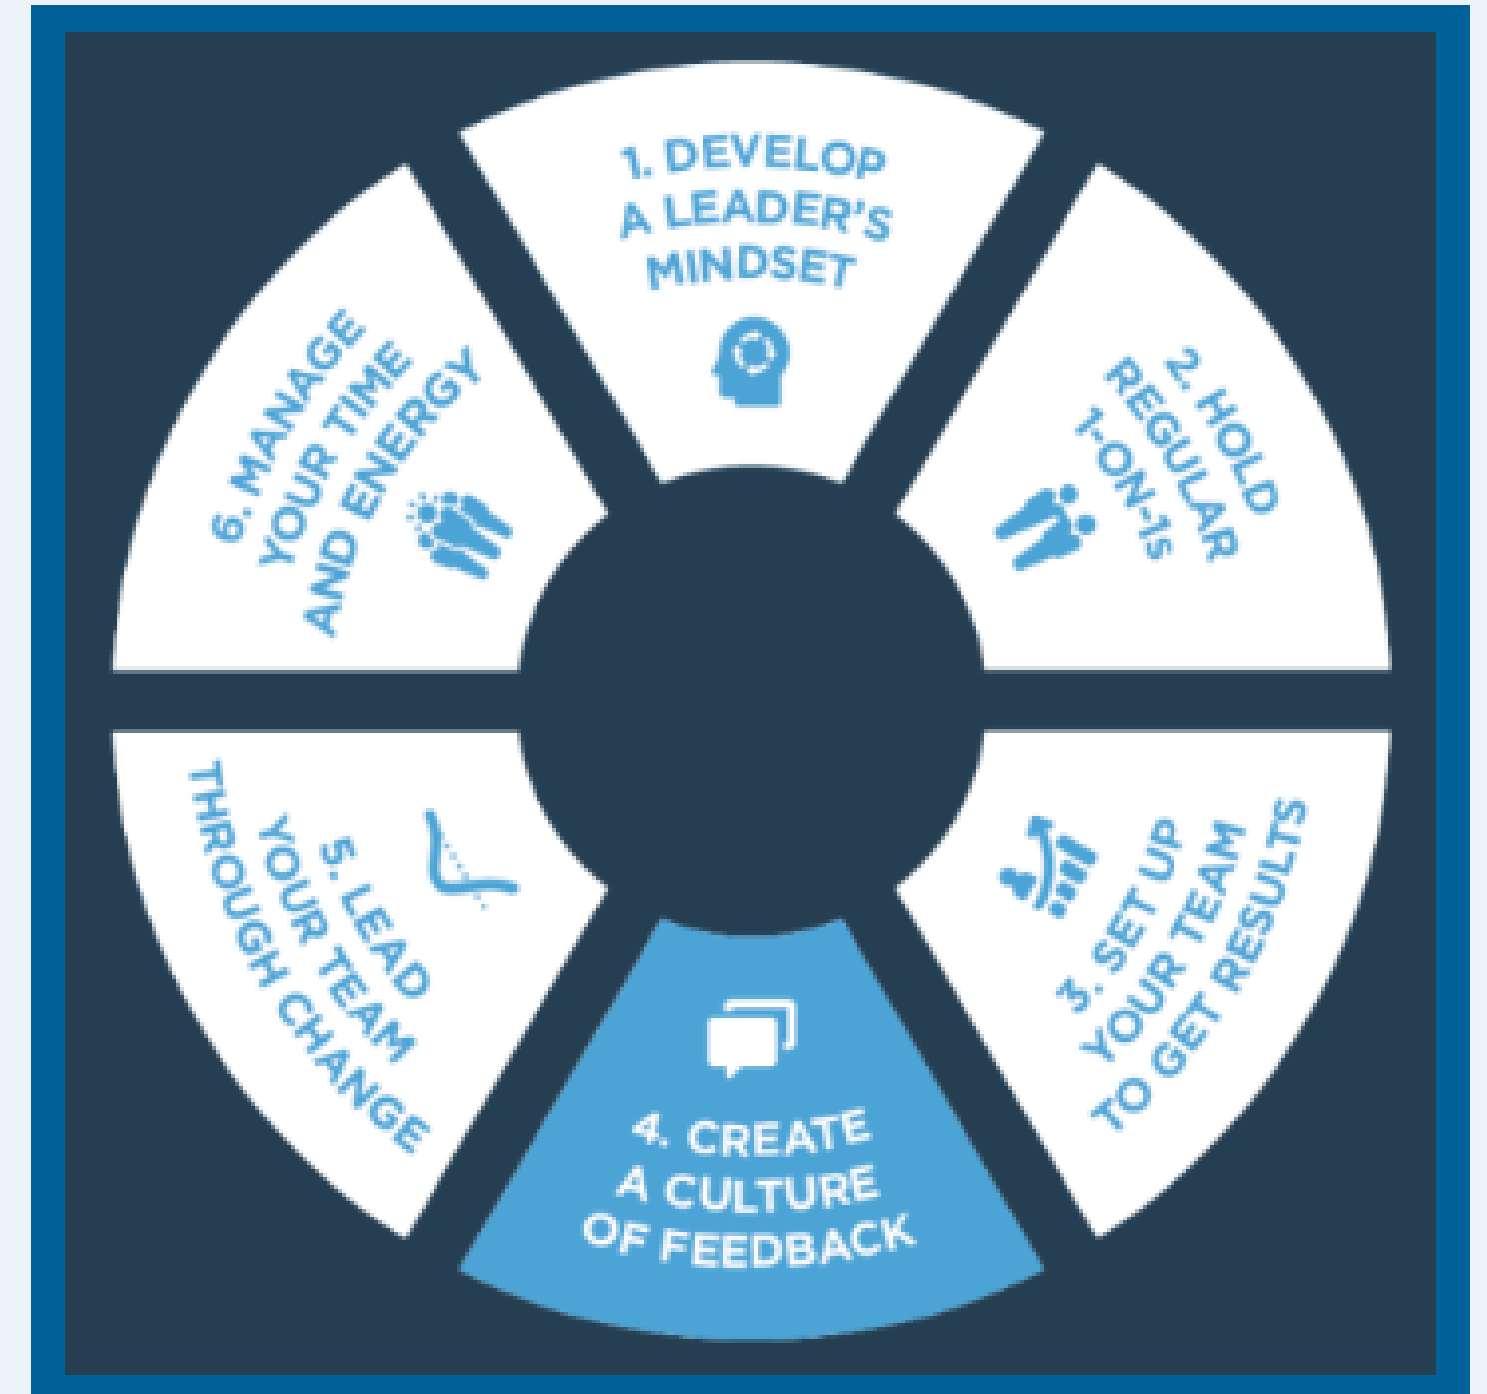

OBJECTIVES

- 01 Prepare and give honest, accurate feedback to your team members.
- 02 Identify two types of feedback: reinforcing and redirecting.
- 03 Seek candid and accurate feedback from your team members.

CHECK YOUR MINDSET

- As shown in Practice 1, your results as a leader are driven by your mindset.
- This practice will focus on helping you achieve an effective mindset to Create a Culture of Feedback with your team members.

Consider each mindset below; What is the mindset's impact on a leader and team?

Common Mindset:

I give feedback so I can fix people's problems.

"I used to think I was doing my team members a favor by pointing out how to solve a problem or make a decision. I learned that I was actually discouraging them from gaining the confidence they need to be successful on their own. I was solving problems, not developing people."

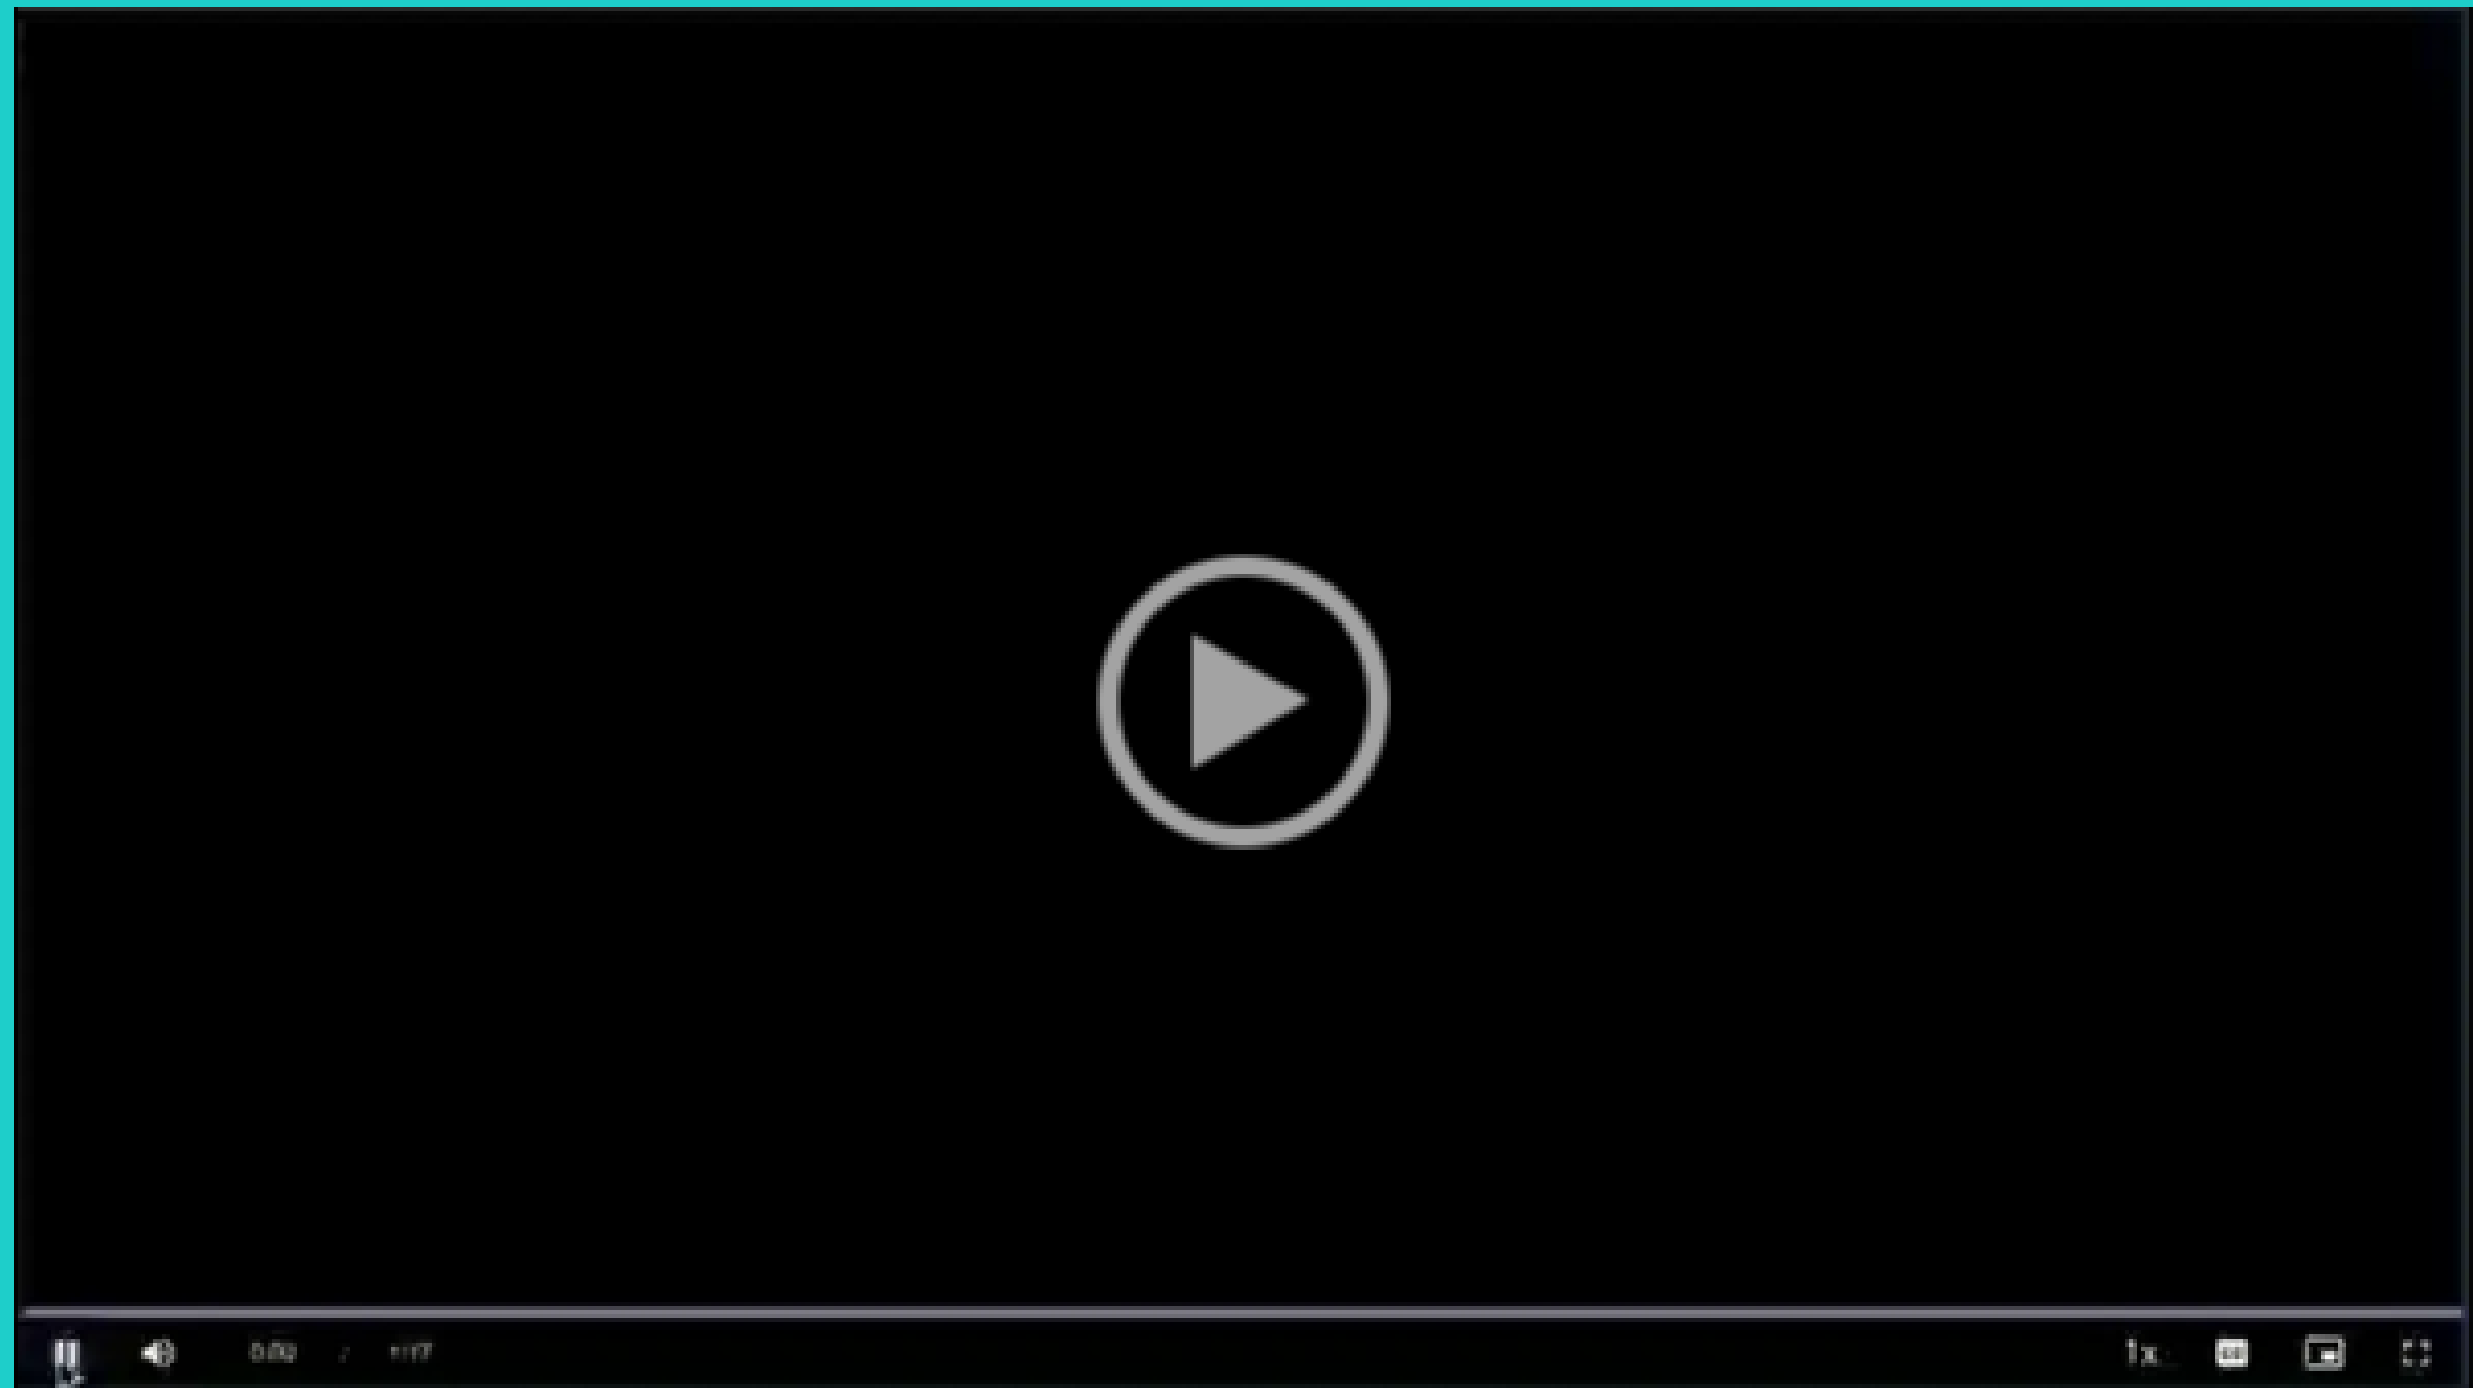

Effective Mindset:

I give and seek feedback to elevate the entire team.

"I learned that properly motivated and communicated feedback helps the other person to learn and grow. I have an improved level of self-awareness and much better results when I ask my team members for their feedback on things I'm working on. Plus, this open communication has helped us build trust with each other."

WHY FEEDBACK?

"One of the greatest gifts you can give another human being is constructive feedback on a blind spot they never knew they had. It's a great disservice not to say what needs to be said because it isn't comfortable. Care enough to give honest, accurate feedback."

—Stephen R. Covey

GIVE HONEST, ACCURATE FEEDBACK

Let's think about how to improve the ways you give feedback to people on your team. First, we'll take a look at the "dos" and "don'ts" of giving feedback.

DO:

Clarify Your Intent:

Make sure your intent is to help the other person learn and grow. If your intent is not genuine, reconsider giving feedback.

Share Specific Observations:

Lay out the facts of what you've seen and the behaviors you have observed. Use "I" messages to do this. "I've observed that ____." "It appears to me ____."

Describe the Impact:

State the impact on results. What outcomes has this behavior produced?

Ask for/Offer Suggestions as Needed:

Explore ways to either repeat positive behaviors (reinforcing) or adopt new behaviors (redirecting).

DONT:

Use Generic Language:

Vague or extreme statements may sound insincere.

Make Assumptions:

Feedback that's based on wrong assumptions is not valid. Ensure you have the facts about a situation to give accurate feedback.

Take a moment to reflect on which of the feedback dos and don'ts apply to you. What are you already doing well? Where can you improve?

GIVE HONEST, ACCURATE FEEDBACK

CLARIFY YOUR INTENT:

Express your intent to help the other person learn and grow.

SHARE SPECIFIC OBSERVATIONS:

Lay out the facts of what you've seen.

DESCRIBE THE IMPACT:

What outcomes
has this behavior produced?

ASK FOR/OFFER SUGGESTIONS AS NEEDED:

Explore ways to either repeat positive behaviors
(reinforce) or adopt new behaviors
(redirecting).

"Leadership is communicating to people their worth and potential so clearly that they come to see it in themselves."

—Stephen R. Covey

TWO TYPES OF FEEDBACK:

- Reinforcing Feedback
- Redirecting Feedback

Reinforcing Feedback

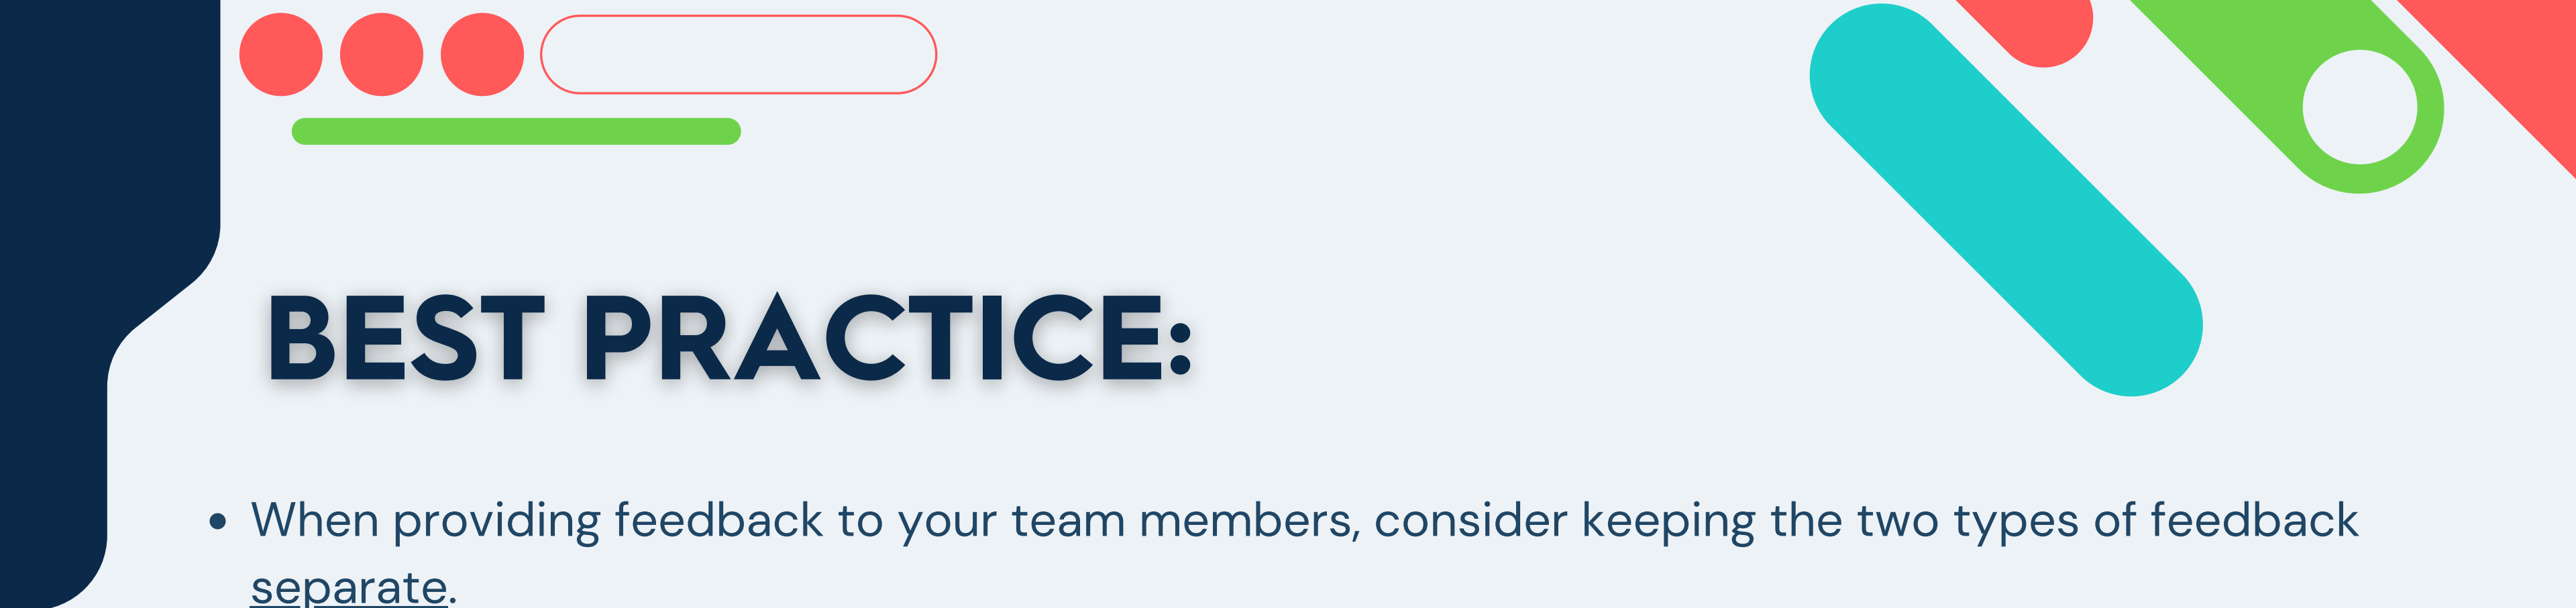

Share it when you catch team members doing the right thing. This feedback:

- Highlights behaviors that positively impact results.
- Inspires team members to repeat these behaviors moving forward.
- Builds team members' confidence and competence.
- Creates a culture in which people feel respected and appreciated.

Redirecting Feedback

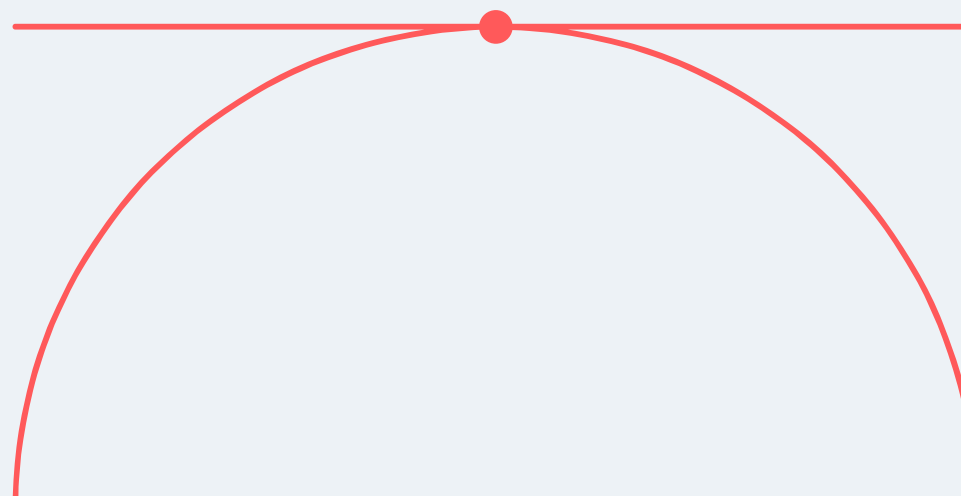

Share it when you see opportunities for development. This feedback:

- Raises team members' awareness of undesirable behaviors.
- Highlights the impact of those behaviors on team performance and results.
- Clarifies expected future behaviors.
- Communicates belief in team members' abilities to improve performance.

BEST PRACTICE:

- When providing feedback to your team members, consider keeping the two types of feedback separate.
- Give reinforcing feedback in one conversation. Give redirecting feedback in another conversation.
- It can be overwhelming when the two types of feedback are communicated in the same conversation. Redirecting feedback will always eclipse reinforcing feedback.

QUICK CHECK:

Which type of feedback does each sentence describe?

Reinforcing or Redirecting?

- 1 Inspires team members to repeat these behaviors moving forward.
- 2 Clarifies expected different behavior for the future.
- 3 Highlights behaviors that positively impact results.

KEY SUMMARY:

When you understand that your role is to help people learn and grow, you realize giving feedback is a powerful practice. It is especially important to remember that feedback should reinforce positive behaviors and also identify opportunities for improvement. If you give feedback regularly, you'll help your team members become a high-performing team.

"GIVING FEEDBACK" PLANNER:

The "Giving Feedback" Planner tool will help you get clear on your intent in providing feedback and the impact of the behavior you are looking for.

This preparation will ensure that your feedback will be more valuable to your team members.

Read each section of the tool below to see some example answers to the questions.

Answer these questions to prepare to give effective feedback – either reinforcing or redirecting. Who needs this feedback (e.g., boss, team, individual, etc.)?

Diana

When and where will you share this feedback?

1:1 meeting tomorrow in my office.

CLARIFY YOUR INTENT. What is your intent?

Help Diana communicate more effectively in meetings.

SHARE SPECIFIC OBSERVATIONS. What situation have you noticed?

Diana has not been participating in meetings

What are the observable behaviors and facts around the situation?

Diana hasn't spoken at all in the past two team meetings and only once in the meeting before that. She has raised concerns about projects to other members of the team outside of the team meeting.

DESCRIBE THE IMPACT. What is the impact of this behavior on results?

Team meetings are important opportunities to discuss issues with projects with the rest of the team. Without Diana's input, we could face issues or delays.

ASK FOR/OFFER SUGGESTIONS. If giving redirecting feedback, what is the behavior you want to ask for in the future?

Diana needs to raise issues and opportunities that impact projects in team meetings so everyone hears them and can address them together.

"GIVING FEEDBACK" PLANNER:

The Situation:

- Over the last week, Robert has seemed distracted and unmotivated.
- You've noticed him checking his phone every couple of minutes during team meetings and 1:1s.
- Yesterday he missed the deadline for an assignment you'd asked him to complete.
- You want to give him some feedback in your next 1:1.

When and where will you share this feedback?

CLARIFY YOUR INTENT. What is your intent?

Support Robert in regaining focus and meeting commitments

SHARE SPECIFIC OBSERVATIONS. What situation have you noticed?

Robert seems distracted and missing deadlines.

What are the observable behaviors and facts around the situation?

Robert frequently checks his phone during meetings and 1:1s, and he missed yesterday's assignment deadline.

DESCRIBE THE IMPACT. What is the impact of this behavior on results?

When Robert is distracted and missing deadlines, it disrupts team productivity and affects the trust and reliability we've established. It also places extra pressure on other team members to compensate for the incomplete work.

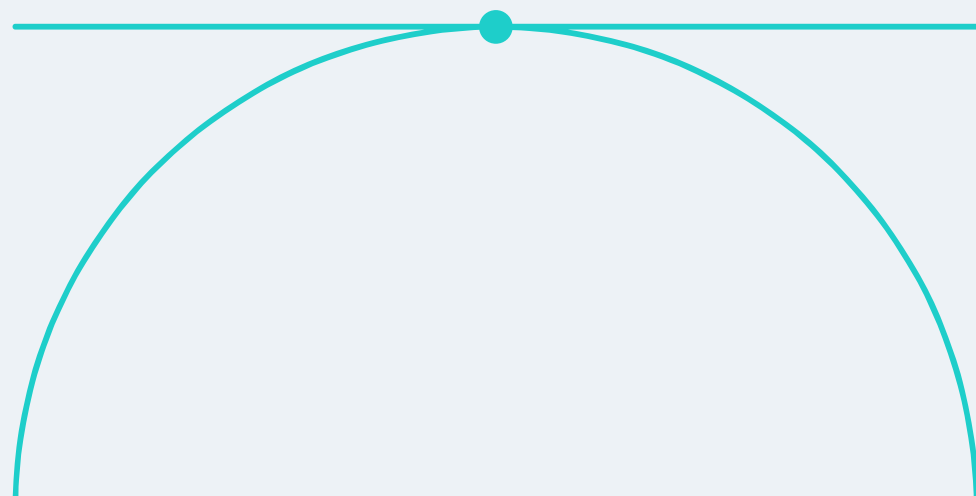

ASK FOR/OFFER SUGGESTIONS. If giving redirecting feedback, what is the behavior you want to ask for in the future?

I'll ask Robert to keep his phone away during meetings and communicate proactively if he's struggling.

IT IS YOUR TURN TO PRACTICE:

- Pull up the “Giving Feedback” Planner tool.
- Choose one team member who needs feedback – it can be reinforcing or redirecting.
- Answer the questions in preparation for a feedback discussion with that team member.
- Participant Choice: Solo or Partner Activity

QUESTIONS OR COMMENTS?

Thank You

saga[®]
EDUCATION